As a licensed clinical social worker I have learned that people possess the resiliency to overcome life's challenges. Working with the correct therapist can allow a person to discover or strengthen these skills within themselves. I've worked within the STEM community for the last two years and am excited for the opportunity to continue working with this community at the STEM Center for Strength.

"I believe in a straightforward approach in combating challenges while utilizing a combination of current evidence based practices and trauma informed care to help you reach your goals."
